Environment Minister Cummings 'impressed'

by Don Norman

Environment Minister Glen Cummings visited Abitibi-Price paper mill in Pine Falls last Thursday. Darren Praznik arranged the trip to give Cummings an opportunity to observe the way industry is handling environmental concerns in rural Manitoba.

After touring the mill, Cummings met with Abitibi mill manager Fern Pitre to discuss Abitibi's commitment to sustainable development, the catch phrase for maintaining a balance between industry and the environment.

In an interview after the meeting, Cummings said he was pleased to see the steps Abitibi was taking towards keeping up with environmental concerns. "I am particularly impressed with Abitibi's initiative within the area recycling," he said. Presently 1% of the mill's total output comes from recycled paper, approximately five tonnes a day. "We are buying (all the recyclable paper) we can get our hands on," said Pitre, who hopes eventually to raise production of recycled paper to five percent of their total output. Previously the mill had collected its own paper, but now it is done through the Resource Recovery institute, a Winnipeg organization that collects paper for recycling.

Also discussed was the impact changing regulations due to public outcry over environmental issues would have on the mill. Cummings was concerned with the lack of communication between the federal and provincial government over environmental regulations. Pitre anticipates a considerable increase in costs due to new federal regulations on the environment soon to be put in effect.

Also on Cummings's agenda for the day were the Underground Research Lab in Lac du Bonnet and the Pinawa nuclear power station.

Ojibway Juniors beat St. Bon. Tomahawks

by Don Norman

Two of the strongest teams in the Junior Box Lacrosse League battled it out at the Powerview Arena last Sunday. The Fort Alexander Ojibway Juniors scored a 10-9 victory over the St. Boniface Tomahawks.

Fort Alexander dominated the play for most of the game, gaining an early 7-3 lead over the Tomahawks, but the Tomahawks took advantage of the penalty trouble Fort Alexander ran into, to score four power play goals, evening the the score. The Tomahawks could not keep up their scoring spree and eventually had to admit defeat.

The crowd of 200 spectators represented one of the largest ever. "It's the largest number of fans we have had in five or ten years," coach See JUNIORS / page 4

Sailing classes for Pine Falls students

by Don Norman

Pine Falls students enjoyed a couple of days sailing on the Winnipeg River last week, while taking a course of instruction from the Manitoba Sailing Association. Instructor Tom LeBoldus showed students the finer points of sailing on the river just outside St. Georges.

High winds provided a lot of excitement for the kids. Jeff Whitford, a teacher from Pine Falls and an avid sailor himself, accompanied the students on their outing. He said the winds were a bit too much on Tuesday, "that meant a lot of kids in the water," he said.

It was Tom LeBoldus' first years with the Manitoba Sailing Association but he has been instructing for the last six summers. Tom has also been involved in several races over the years but now sticks to instruction and sailing for pleasure.

The course the students took involved some classroom instruction, but once the See SAILING / page 12

Sporting clay course opens

by Don Norman

The Winnipeg River Game Bird Co-op Ltd. of St. Georges has set up a sporting clays course on land leased to them just off of Broadlands Road.

Sporting clays is a variation of trap shooting where participants stop at several stations along a course where they test their shooting skills. The course the co-op has set up is situated on 420 acres of woodlands, with seven stations designed to simulate actual hunting situations.

It is a 50 bird course, one point is scored for each kill. The shooter can only use a limited number of shells for each station, depending on the number of birds thrown at each station. A group must have three or more shooters.

Sporting Clay is a very popular sport in the United States and is increasing in popularity in Canada. The co-op, owned and operated by Albert Dupont, Luc Vincent, and Guy Bruneau, does most of its advertising through posters in and around the area. They hope eventually to tap a large market by advertising in some of the major sporting magazines. They will also be introducing game birds to the fall as an added attraction.

The course is open all year round, weather permitting. The recent rains cause no problems for participants. "Just remember to wear your rubber boots," Guy Bruneau says.

Shooter takes aim at clay pigeon on the sporting clay course near Broadlands Road.

POLICE REPORT

On June 4, a skateboard was found and turned into the RCMP office.

At 10:30 a.m. on June 10, a dog was shot on the South Shore of the Fort Alexander Reserve. The incident is still under investigation.

There were four impaired charges, one minor drug seizure and three Liquor Control Act charges.

Sunnywood Manor news

This was a week for birthdays. Jean Velie celebrated on June 4 and Hugh Stewart on June 7. A happy birthday to both! We will hold a birthday party for the two of them later in the month.

The games in the regular Tuesday morning bingo were close this week. Winnings were split between three — Frank Ryan, Mary Horvath and Stanford Houston. Church service was held this week by Reverend Pat Hall and enjoyed by all. Thursday morning the Home was filled with the delicious smell of baking as Mary Horvath, Myrtle Mackie and Alice Robitaille made brownies and apple-cinnamon muffins. When the sun peeked through the mists of rain, a few of us took a brief stroll around the village green to enjoy the warmth of spring. And to help bring spring indoors this week, large paper flowers were made for every room.

The residents appreciate the many visitors who have been coming by. However, it is preferred that arrangements be made before hand for those wanting to tour our lovely new facility. Please call 367-8201.

Your Canada, Your Parliament, Your Business

by The Honourable Jake Epp
M.P. Provencher

Environment Week in review

All across Canada, people are thinking and talking about the environment and are taking practical steps to clean up our country. This is true in Provencher as well. On our streets and in our coffee shops, many wonder and worry about our environment.

The Government of Canada shares this concern. Our objective is to make Canada the most environmentally friendly, industrialized nation in the world. This is no small task. But Canadians have been quick to pick up the challenge and are already acting to improve the quality of our environment. We all care about the world we leave behind for our children. But we will be asking much more of ourselves in the next decades — and some hard choices will have to be made. We must put our collective imagination to work to find ways to produce and consume what we need in our economy in a way that does not damage the physical heritage that we will leave to future generations. And we must find these ways in partnership with consumers, industry, scientists and government. All must work together — not in confrontation.

This is why Environment Canada sponsored Canadian Environment Week, June 3-9, 1990. It funded a total of 24 environmental projects in Manitoba as part of the celebration. Organized and run by non-profit groups, the projects covered a wide range of activities, from new recycling initiatives and wildlife habitat enhancement, to community clean-ups and environmental fairs. Provencher also had its share of activities. For example the Whitemouth River Cleanup and Survey began with a kickoff at the river near Seven Sisters Falls. Members of the Save the Whitemouth River Committee and other concerned residents surveyed the river for garbage and other pollutants, and began to clean

Hospital spruced up

Thanks to the generosity of John Poitras, the Pine Falls Health Complex now has a permanent Tree of Lights planted which all can enjoy for many years to come.

When the hospital was being constructed the planned landscaping was cut from the budget by the funding agency because of other cost factors. Now, thanks to the special efforts of Cheryl Boisvert, Elaine Pinnell, John Poitras and the maintenance staff, we were able to plant some of the shrubs that were in the original design. It's made a very pleasant change and received many favourable comments. This will help tie the hospital building into the landscape planned for the Care Home and provide a more pleasant summer environment for all.

Warren speaks...

by Investigative Reporter Peter Warren

Readers speak up: Garbage to guns!

Four times a year, this column hits the mailbox so that we can all get a feel about the various and sundry issues that are on the minds of rural Manitobans. What follows is the summertime edition of mailed feedback, with one exception — I have weeded out (with a wide swath) all and any comments about the Meech Lake Accord.

This action was accomplished with one objective in mind — the sanity of this writer, the sanity of all readers, and the sanity of the publisher and/or editor of this esteemed publication.

Thus, without fear or favor, the best of the mailbox:

J.S. Berkley, of Morden, took me to task about the column on gun-control: "I fought against the Nazi tyranny for freedom, and that includes the right of security to bear arms for self-protection. What would have happened to Hitler's Final Solution if — when the jackboot adventures came to kick in the door of his disarmed Jewish citizens' homes — they had been met with an appropriate deterrent? I believe the Holocaust would not have happened to the extent it did."

From Pine Falls, David Savard, agreed with the column which suggested that Attorney-General Jim McCree's job was not that of a censor. "What we have here, Mr. Warren, is a group of mind-controllers. And, at the same time, we have the mind-healers, who say you should go to jail for saying something that is controversial. And, isn't it strange that Eastern Europe is now trying to rid itself of those blind people?"

From Killarney, Anne Otto is still mad about parking tickets rural people receive in Winnipeg: "Why don't the police remove the licence plate from a car they know owes hundreds or thousands of dollars in tickets...and then leave rural cars alone? We make mistakes, you know."

Hockey Night In Canada, on television, took it in the neck in a most sensible letter from Susan Unrau of Boissevain: "I loathe those commercials that only carry the message — 'lust and drink' — and how many people are watching? What message are we sending to our young people — 'you can only have fun if you drink' — and that is not the true picture, all the accidents, the broken homes and all the grief. None of that is shown."

Somebody who signs (himself or herself) L. Kirsten of Carman, wants to dump the idea of having our photographs on drivers' licences: "This program is to be handled by a Toronto-based firm for the grand sum of $4.9 million. It is merely another 'Eastern' investment. Surely the health minister or the agriculture minister could use this money. I cannot fathom what a snapshot of me would prove — it surely would not make me a better driver."

On a computerized letter, the Wellwoods of Gardenton, suggest that urban governments follow the example of people in Arizona who use a hydraulic, cylindrical press on their garbage. "One landfill site would take the place of three. It would save time, labor and money."

Warren Loewen of Altona is not satisfied with Health Minister Don Orchard's wishy-washy answer on why the College of Physicians and Surgeons, or the RCMP don't chase doctors who de-fraud the system: "Victims are forgotten; offenders get away."

And what else (outside of Meech) is on the minds of rural Manitobans who read this column?

Jean R. Oliver of Killarney, "I find this matter totally disgusting" (about gun-control

BOOK NOOK

by Shirley Flakbinder

If you are looking for a great book to read this summer, borrow Lady of Hay by Barbara Erskine. It is a real spellbinder.

But don't take it on your holiday unless you plan to just sit in the sun, because once in to it you will absolutely not be able to put it down.

The story is that of Joanna Clifford, a journalist who in 1986, under hypnosis, regresses to 1175 and into the life of Matilda, Lady of Hay.

And the reader goes right with her to medieval England, to the time and the life of Matilda de Braose in the reign of Henry II.

We are given a fascinating look at a life at that time, at a woman in a loveless marriage, and all the cruelty and intrigue that were present in the king's court and in the castles of his noblemen.

Joanna makes the decision to continue to return to this previous life until she reaches a point where she cannot lay Matilda's ghost, but rather, she is drawn and consumed by Matilda's life and loves.

It is impossible in this space to describe the drama and the tragedy as Matilda's story unfolds through Joanna; the persecution of her family by King John and finally as she and her son are lowered into a dungeon and left to starve to death.

And Joanna, drawn inexorably to the ruins at Corfe Castle, almost dies as well before she finds it is all finally over and she is free.

This is a big book, but don't let the size discourage you. It will keep you glued to the pages. I promise you that whatever you happen to think about hypnotic regression, the story idea is terrific, and you will feel the fear and the evil, and you will almost, almost believe that reincarnation is a distinct possibility.

Juniors beat Tomahawks

Mike Gibert said. "We can't even draw those sort of crowds in Winnipeg."

Many of the players in the Fort Alexander junior team also enjoyed victory in the Manitoba High School Field Lacrosse League when the Fort Alexander Raiders took home the league championship with a 9-1 win over Maples Collegiate.

On Sunday, June 17, Fort

Alexander is scheduled to play the Kelvin Terriers at the Powerview Arena at 2:30 p.m., but the game may be moved up to 1:00 p.m. due to conflict with a baseball tournament being held at the same time.

And the list goes on:

Dress accordingly"...C.W. Smith, Grand Rapids, on the use of MTS facilities during the forest fires last year: "My phone was out of order for a month. I was charged the grand sum of $5.18. Don't call me, I'll call you!" Vera Manness of Elm Creek, whose daughter teaches in Killarney, tells me that her and her husband "fear for this country" and James Salvold of Pinawa takes a huge cannon shot at The Winnipeg Free Press for the switch to morning delivery: "they are using the schools to recruit scabs, because in some cases carriers have quit because they do not want to deliver early in the morning."

Heh, that's a whole pile of issues. Keep those cards and letters coming.

That's what this column is all about.

FOCUS ON:

Parents — Read to your children

by Marilyn Zarecki
Parent Economist
 Manitoba Agriculture
 Resource, 268-1411

A superintendent of a large public school system once said: "If parents of preschoolers would read to them every day — if for only 15 minutes — children and schools would be revolutionized." We live in a world of children who can't or won't or don't like to read. This is partly because, in families, little reading is done. All too often the TV has replaced books.

We have always known that the family plays a big role in helping its members grow. Research done in the past ten years has shown that the power of the family is even greater than most of us imagined. What happens in the family is critical to how a child learns in school and functions in life. A wise parent will start early to build a good reading base. From the parent's perspective, it's a way to talk to children using real words, not baby talk. The words often are descriptive and put together in phrases and sentences not regularly heard at home.

Such session also are a way to listen to children. Pictures and words often remind children of things happening in their world, unlocking their desire to share them with you. The child develops a larger vocabulary, a livelier imagination and a better attitude about books and reading through such experiences. And he or she develops a special relationship with the parent or other adult who is offering them undivided attention.

It is never too early or late to begin reading to your child. If you've missed the preschool years, don't give up on the idea. It may be that you'll need a trip to the library and some special help to find a book about a special interest, things like snakes, adventure, space or dancing.

Another way to bring new and exciting ideas into the home for children to read and appreciate is to subscribe to a magazine they enjoy. Success will be enhanced by your expression of genuine interest in reading to or with your child. Once you begin spending minutes or hours together, it will become one of the best parts of your day.

Studies conclusively show that parents and other interested family members and friends can make a difference in a child's development of reading and other learned skills. You will feel both proud and relieved that your child will not be a part of those negative statistics in the future, that he or she will be better prepared to advance faster in school and one day be a more productive citizen because of your interest and effort in those important early years of life.

Cities need towns as much as the towns need the cities

Let me doff my toque and bow low in the direction of Watrous. My salute is directed at Frank Wilson, publisher of The Manitou. I wish a hundred other prairie editor-publishers would emulate one of his recent actions.

What friend Frank did was drive into Saskatoon and tell the rural story to a big-city business representatives. The Saskatoon chamber was sponsoring an urban-rural discussion, and the man from Watrous was selected to explain the rural side of things. He reiterated some of his central points in a newspaper column.

Frank Wilson takes the position that the cities need the towns just as much as the towns need the cities. Despite the fact some of these relationships have become poisoned through hard feelings over many years, there now is a need for mutual aid, although this is rarely recognized.

Central to the Wilson philosophy is the belief that city executives should think of farming some of their work-related activities out to the towns. More persons from towns could be hired in the cities. "Our towns have many talented people and tradesmen who would be willing to do a bit of commuting, or as is happening more often, link themselves to a head office by computer modem and do their work at home."

Another key Wilson argument is the benefit living in a town. The Watrous publisher cites no parking meters, no traffic noise, less crime or social disruption, good schools and sports facilities, and no youngsters lining up at 5:00 a.m. at the door of the arena.

Let me get my nickel's worth in here on top of Frank Wilson's. I say one of the great inhibitors to rural economic development is the wretched condition of our mass communications. In the case of Saskatoon, that city talks endlessly to surrounding towns via radio, TV, and the dailies, but there is virtually no flow the other way. Many, (change that to most) city residents don't give two consecutive thoughts to the plight of farms and towns and are not aware of current rural conditions.

Rural residents can't talk to all of the city types, but by having rural speakers at selected forums and conventions, it is possible to connect the commercial and political leaders. What we need now is more ruralites prepared to become vocal. We could solve a number of rural problems if city residents, and their leaders, learned how rural depopulation was influencing the lives of all Canadians. Cities are spending millions extending their utilities to accommodate the victims of rural depopulation. If those transplanted families find no employment, their names are added to the welfare rolls. I suspect some of our elected representative haven't given a thought to the social costs involved in maintaining rural utilities if the customers leave the farms and towns. Never yet have I heard a sensible comment about the need for Canadians to help the towns in order to protect the food industry. We'll never get the city residents to think of the towns and farms unless we talk to them. Perhaps Frank Wilson has begun the dialogue.

Sailing right along

The fun part about sailing.

students became familiar with the theory of sailing, they could go out and try the real thing. The course is approved by the Canadian Yachting Association and earns the students their White Sail Level I and two badges.

The course cost $700.00, a charge of $35.00 for each of the 20 students involved, and included is the cost of instruction and the use of several Laser II boats.

All of the kids had a great time, their only complaint was the cold water of the Winnipeg River. Jeff Whitford hopes the outing will begin to encourage an interest in sailing, a sport which presently does not receive much attention in the area.
